My program reads in three integers representing the angles of a triangle, and then prints out what specific triangle it is.